A BILL

BILL HISTORY

The Colorado Advocate, for nearly a twentieth of a century (three years), has provided the law school and the university community with insightful and quality coverage of issues in the law as well as activities and events at the Law School. In its first year of existence the Advocate won recognition from the American Bar Association as the best law school newspaper in the country. During the 1987-88 academic term the newspaper was once again recognized as an outstanding student newspaper, winning awards in several categories.

The Advocate plans to publish five issues during the 1988-89 term, printing 2,000 copies with distribution across campus and in the community. The Executive Council, by passing this bill, will play a significant role in supporting this year's newspaper.
