A BILL

BILL HISTORY

Nuclear testing is certainly not a new phenomenon. Here in the U.S. testing has gone on in Nevada for 40 years, despite stiff resistance by Native Shoshones who were displaced by such testing. Such displacement is by no means restricted to the U.S. The French have been conducting Nuclear tests in the Pacific Rim for longer than the U.S. The Soviet Union's headquarters is Semipalatinsk, Kazakhstan. Both of these testing programs have been protested vehemently by native populations.

Global environmental degradation has been the result in all 3 ecosystems. The human toll has been significant as well. With the ever increasing concern for the environment, a discussion on these testing policies and their effects on both the planet and we who inhabit it is timely.
