A BILL

BILL HISTORY

The American Institute of Architecture Students (AIAS) is an international organization to unite students across the continent, representing student concerns to the American Institute of Architects, regulating architectural registration, and most of all, improving architectural education and student life.

The AIAS's annual conference, FORUM, is being held in Miami from November 26-December 1. This year's theme is Suburbia: Where the Suburbs Meet Utopia. It is a great chance to experience an architecturally rich environment with other students from different universities, listen and talk to renowned designers and architects, and get a better understanding of the big picture in the field of architecture and design education. During the FORUM, national policy is decided and elections are held.

Approximately ten students will be making the trek to Florida and the AIAS is currently investigating other monetary sources, such as donations from the Colorado AIA and individual architects and fundraising endeavors such as a professor pie throw and the sale of t-shirts.
