A resolution recognizing and thanking Tina Wells for her contributions and leadership in the Buff Up the Rec Project

Resolution History

In Spring 2011, Students voted overwhelmingly to establish a new fee to renovate and expand the University of Colorado Student Government (hereafter 'CUSG') recreation center. Soon after, Recreation Services, CUSG, and Planning, Construction, and Design (hereafter 'PDC') began designing and developing the renovation. After a period of design and development, the project officially broke ground in Fall 2012. Since then, Tina has pushed the project forward and ensured a successful completion, as well as student involvement in the process. Although there have been significant challenges and some delays to the project, we are nearing the successful completion of the project within the budget specified by the student body. Tina's leadership has been essential in overcoming those challenges and minimizing the delays, even those caused by the 2013 Colorado floods and adverse weather events.

Resolution Summary

Tina Wells has contributed to the success of the Buff Up the Rec project in countless ways and we are greatly appreciative of her involvement in the project. In many cases, Tina went above and beyond her duties by making extra time to explain the intricacies of the project to students, to come in on weekends to help clean locker rooms and newly finished spaces to prepare them to be opened, and to push the construction team to meet important deadlines. The University of Colorado Boulder student body has been privileged to have Tina serve as the project manager for Buff Up the Rec and we owe her our greatest thanks and appreciation.

Whereas, the Buff Up the Rec project broke ground in Fall 2012;
